*T*hat The Future May Know

From ancient times, honor has been accorded warriors who have fallen on the battlefield. All over the world there stand memorials to those who served their country in strife—from simple crosses on a hillside to great obelisks in city squares.

This book is an humble but sincere effort to commemorate the heroism of the thirteen members of the State Medical Society of Wisconsin who were killed in action or died of wounds, disease or injury in service during World War II. We hope it will perpetuate the memory of those who did not return, and serve to remind the living that peace is not won without sacrifice.

The role of the physician in time of war is an important one. Our profession looked upon it as a challenge and an opportunity, and faced it in a glorious manner. We can point with pride to our record—for those who served at home as well as those who became medical officers.

Wisconsin sent nearly 1,200 physicians into the armed forces, leaving to those who remained the problem of caring for the state's entire medical needs, as well as absorbing a greatly accelerated program of industrial health and civilian defense.

There were heroes on the homefront, too, and while this book cannot accurately reflect the sacrifice, the physical and mental strain, the anxiety and the determination which marked the deeds of physicians in both the civilian or military capacity, it is an expression of the gratitude and respect which those men so richly deserve.

MAJ. GEN. NORMAN T. KIRK
SURGEON GENERAL, U. S. ARMY

I AM GLAD of the opportunity to commend the spontaneous and patriotic cooperation of the medical profession of the State of Wisconsin during World War II. The 44th General Hospital and the 135th Medical Group, which were affiliated units of the Army Medical Department from the University of Wisconsin, were representative of the high professional standards and achievements that characterized the medical profession of your State.

It was because of such men and such organizations as the University of Wisconsin's 44th General Hospital and the 135th Medical Group that the Army Medical Department was able to set a standard for military medicine unapproached in the past and which is a challenge for the future.

New drugs, new techniques and modern equipment are of little avail without the skill and understanding care of the doctor and his staff. The public is well acquainted with these facts, but what is not generally appreciated is the toil, the sacrifice and almost super-human efforts on the part of the medical personnel necessary to bring about such achievements. The heroism of the members of the 44th General Hospital at Leyte is a story that needs no embellishment from me. The 135th Medical Group also won glory for itself as one of the outstanding units of this war.

The small group of Army medical officers who cared for the health of the service in peacetime alone could have accomplished very little during this war without the assistance of the thousands of the country's most able physicians and surgeons who joined our ranks.

Your great state should take pride in the ready response made by her medical profession to their country's need and the knowledge of the contributions and achievements of these men who were willing to risk their lives to provide care for the sick and wounded. The part they played in planning and organizing the work of the Army Medical Department and caring for the Army's 15,000,000 patients has earned the deep and lasting gratitude of the entire nation. The exceptional record they achieved is a lasting monument to a devoted group which worked faithfully and tirelessly for a noble purpose, the saving of life and the relief of suffering.

VICE ADM. ROSS McINTIRE
SURGEON GENERAL, U. S. NAVY

THE ROLE of the medical officer in war is well known. His major duty is to see to it that the sick and the wounded are properly cared for. He is also responsible for planning the preventive measures in health and sanitation that will make liveable all the areas in which the forces of this country must live and fight.

As we look back through the war years, we know that the record made in lifesaving is one that has never before been equaled. The survival of better than 97% of the Navy's battle casualties in World War II is certainly ample proof that the members of the medical profession who answered the call of our country in a time of crisis performed their duties with the highest degree of professional skill and efficiency. I must, however, say that I would be remiss if I did not pay tribute to the enlisted personnel of the Medical Department of the Navy. Without the bravery and devotion to duty consistently displayed by our hospital corpsmen, our casualties would have been considerably higher. There is no praise too great for the work that was done by the Reserve Medical components, both commissioned and enlisted as well as the regular personnel of the Medical Department. The personnel, officers and enlisted men, of all branches of the Medical Department can be justifiably proud of their contribution to our ultimate victory.

A large majority of the doctors who served in the armed forces during the war have now returned to civil life. It is to be hoped that the lessons they have learned in what can be done for the seriously injured and crippled can be turned to good account among those unfortunates in civil life who suffer like accidents in industry or from the hazards of traffic and transportation.

Today peoples in all parts of the world are striving to find solutions to the inevitable problems which arise after any war. The problems with which we are currently confronted are, indeed, many and serious. The members of the medical profession can play just as important a part in building towards lasting peace as they did in winning the victory. Let us, therefore, make every effort to do all possible to improve the health of our own country and render every assistance, from the medical standpoint, to enable other nations to do the same. We know that men and women who are healthy in mind and body will have an added incentive to improve the health of their children. When this is an accomplished fact, it will be possible for the nations of the world to dissipate fear and distrust among themselves.

William Beaumont, 1785-1853

Dr. William Beaumont, the great physiologist and military surgeon, entered the United States Army in 1812 as a Surgeon's Mate, resigning at the close of the war. In 1820 he re-entered the Army and was assigned to frontier Fort Mackinac where, in 1822, he met Alexis St. Martin, the wounded voyageur on whom he conducted his famous "Experiments and Observation—On the Gastric Juice and Physiology of Digestion." After a tour of duty at Fort Niagra, Surgeon Beaumont was assigned to Fort Howard (Green Bay) in 1826, and in 1829 he was transferred to Fort Crawford (Prairie du Chien). St. Martin rejoined Dr. Beaumont at Fort Crawford for a continuation of the experiments and by 1833 the first edition of "Beaumont's Experiments" was published.

During Dr. Beaumont's years of military duty in the Northwest he conducted his celebrated experiments in digestion, provided the frontier settlements with general medical service, and made strenuous efforts to combat the periodic smallpox and cholera epidemics.

Wisconsin Physicians in Wars of the Past

During the past one hundred and twenty five years Wisconsin has been involved in six periods of military activity of varying scope. These have increased from frontier occupation to the almost total planning and activity of the recent World War II. In each of these periods Wisconsin men bore arms to protect the nation's interests. The health of these people was protected by men and women such as those listed and discussed here.

Some, such as Beaumont and Senn achieved considerable fame. Others such as Hoyt, Wolcott and Seaman are well remembered because they were the type of civilian medical practitioners who readily answered calls to military duty. Mrs. Harvey, although not a doctor, was instrumental in achieving the establishment of hospitals for soldiers when the Army Medical Service was just beginning to emerge from political controls.

These few sketches are not intended to be a history of Wisconsin's contributions to military medicine. They are meant only to remind us of the kinds of military medical services rendered by Wisconsin's citizens.

Mexican War

Otis Hoyt—1812–1885

Dr. Otis Hoyt, a native of Vermont, was commissioned a surgeon in the United States Army for duty in the Mexican War, which included an assignment as chief of the military hospital established at Jalapa, Mexico.

Shortly after the war, Dr. Hoyt moved to Wisconsin, settling at Hudson in the St. Croix River country. He was the pioneer doctor in this section of the state, providing the early settlers with medical care under the most difficult circumstances. With the coming of the Civil War, Dr. Hoyt again assumed military duties as surgeon for the 30th Wisconsin Infantry and was stationed for a time as the examining medical officer at Camp Randall.

Medicine's were few and surgical methods untried in the Mexican War.

Civil War

DR. E. B. WOLCOTT

Erastus B. Wolcott—1804–1880

Dr. E. B. Wolcott, a surgeon in the regular army, resigned his commission and moved to Milwaukee in 1839 where he soon established himself as a leader in professional and community affairs. He was appointed Surgeon General in the Territorial Militia in 1842 and with the coming of the Civil War was appointed Surgeon General of Wisconsin. Dr. Wolcott is credited with having sent out Wisconsin's regiments ably staffed with surgeons and well stocked with medical supplies. The Surgeon General also was responsible for the effective relief missions dispatched to care for Wisconsin sick and wounded in the field. The General continued in the post of State Surgeon until the year of his death.

Milwaukee has honored Dr. Wolcott by dedicating a statue of him in Lake Park and naming the GAR post, E. B. Wolcott Post No. 1.

Mrs. Cordelia A. Perrine Harvey—1823–1895

Mrs. Harvey was the wife of Wisconsin's second war governor, Louis P. Harvey, who lost his life while visiting Wisconsin troops in the military hospitals of the South. Mrs. Harvey carried on the tradition of her husband by being appointed Sanitary Agent in St. Louis by Acting Governor Salomon.

Her untiring and sympathetic services to the sick and wounded caused her to be known as the "Wisconsin Angel." She secured numerous reforms in methods of military hospitalization, and it was Mrs. Harvey who persuaded President Lincoln to establish hospitals in the favorable northern climate. The first of these hospitals was established in Madison, Wisconsin—the Harvey United States General Hospital—in honor of the governor, Louis P. Harvey.

Nicholas Senn—1844–1908

Dr. Nicholas Senn, the world famous surgeon and scholar, spent his boyhood in Ashford and his early years of practice in Milwaukee. He served Wisconsin as Surgeon General from 1888 to 1893 when he moved to Chicago and assumed a like military duty for the Illinois National Guard. During the Spanish-American War he was assigned as Surgeon General United States Volunteers and later as Chief Operating Surgeon with the Army of Invasion in Cuba. In addition to his field and administrative duties, Dr. Senn wrote extensively and taught military medicine at the University of Chicago and Rush Medical Schools.

World War I

Gilbert E. Seaman—1869–1941

Dr. Gilbert Seaman of Milwaukee was an outstanding leader in Wisconsin's public health and military medical affairs. During the Spanish-American War he served as a surgeon with the 4th Wisconsin Infantry and later saw service in the Philippine Insurrection. Dr. Seaman was Surgeon General of Wisconsin from 1913 to 1917 and after World War I served in the same post from 1920 until 1933.

His World War I duties included the position of Division Surgeon with the famed 32nd Red Arrow Division followed by assignment as Corps Surgeon for the Sixth Army Corps.

Col. Seaman was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and the French Legion of Honor for his notable services.

The 44th Hospital Unit

Wisconsin's only hospital unit, the 44th General Hospital, was formally approved by the Surgeon General on November 27, 1940, following his invitation to the University of Wisconsin Medical School to form an "affiliated unit."

It was realized that to completely man such a unit would deplete the staff of the Wisconsin General Hospital and the faculty of the medical school to an uncomfortably low level. Doctor W. S. Middleton, Madison, dean of the medical school, directed Dr. J. W. Gale, chief of surgery, and Dr. Frank Weston, chief of medicine, both of Madison, to pick the professional personnel for the hospital. Men were chosen from hospital and preceptor staffs to continue the teaching and human services of the medical school and hospital in military service.

In May, 1942, Dr. Weston took over as director of the work begun with Drs. Gale and Middleton, the latter having already left for active service. When Dr. Weston took command most of the personnel had voluntarily entered the Army, become commissioned and gone to duty with the 6th Service Command before the 44th General Hospital was activated as a unit.

During the period May, 1942 to January, 1943, this personnel, including nurses, served at numerous hospital posts in capacities comparable with the positions they were expected to hold in the 44th hospital. The hospital was finally activated as a complete unit at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, on January 19, 1943. Lt. Col. Weston and ten physician officers joined the enlisted cadre and two reserve officers who had been assigned as Commanding Officer and Executive Officer of the hospital. They were Col. Henry G. Waddell and Lt. Col. Howard C. Martin.

Nine months of intensive training in professional, administrative and field activities brought this cadre into splendid shape. Additional medical officers and most of the nurses joined the Fort Sill contingent in August, 1943 so that the entire group had a few weeks of training together before moving to the Port of Embarkation in September, 1943. Just before leaving Fort Sill, the unit lost Lt. Col. Gale by transfer to another post. Lt. Col. J. W. McRoberts, Sheboygan, was assigned to replace him as chief of surgery.

The nurses of the 44th General Hospital embarked from San Francisco in early October, 1943, and landed in Australia more than a month later. They were quartered in Brisbane until joining the hospital in its first professional activity in January, 1944 at Townsville. The male officer group and enlisted men left the United States on October 27, 1943 and landed in Australia in mid-November.

This contingent remained at Sidney for a short time in anticipation of a move to active hospital service at Milne Bay, New Guinea. All hospital equipment and some personnel went forward to New Guinea in November where a site was picked for the hospital. The remainder of the 44th General personnel followed, but their ship floundered on coral reefs northeast of Australia and nearly all were returned to the mainland. This resulted in a complete change in plans.

Eventually, the 44th General Hospital took over the 12th Station Hospital at Townsville, Australia. The 12th Station Hospital had done outstanding work in this small city and had built an enviable reputation for itself throughout the theater. A great deal of the credit for that work goes to Col. Harry H. Heiden, Sheboygan, who was Commanding Officer of the unit before its absorption by the 44th General Hospital.

Half of the personnel of the 44th was assigned to the building of a new hospital 10 miles from Townsville, and the 44th moved to its new location in mid-Summer, 1944. In late October, the hospital was moved to Hollandia, New Guinea, and after a brief stop-over, continued on to Leyte in the Philippine Islands. Col. Waddell was relieved of duty due to illness in November, 1944, and Col. Weston became Commanding Officer of the 44th. Col. John E. Bentley became chief of medical service.

On Leyte the 44th General Hospital had one of the most unique experiences of any general hospital in any theater. Under ordinary circumstances, a general hospital serves as a base quite removed from the scene of battle where the more serious casualties can be brought for more complete treatment than can be given at field or station hospitals.

The 44th was located at the foot of the mountains near the center of the island. It bordered on three partially completed Japanese air strips which in the original invasion plans were to be the main points of air activity on Leyte. The hospital was serving the entire 5th Air Force and air evacuees being brought in from all combat areas in the Philippines.

With little or no equipment and without security service from combat troops, the 44th General Hospital functioned both as a hospital and combat outfit from mid-November to mid-December, 1944. During this period, the Japanese made a successful parachute invasion of Leyte and effected the complete isolation of troops in the center of the island. Tropical downpours and seemingly bottomless pools of mud brought land vehicular transportation to a standstill and increased the isolation.

The Japanese airborne infantry came out of the sky one night in December, 1944. An air corps engineer unit near the hospital was the first to be invaded. Outposts of the 44th General Hospital joined the fray and contributed immeasurably to the repulsion of the first attack. The engineer unit withdrew immediately to a position about one-quarter of a mile behind the hospital defense line.

Without aid the 44th hospital officers and corpsmen kept their defenses intact throughout the night. By dawn, American casualties consisted of one paratrooper killed and Lt. Col. E. A. Birge and Major James Bingham of the 44th wounded. Twenty-three dead Japanese soldiers were found around the hospital defenses and no one knows how many wounded were moved back by the enemy before morning.

For seven months the 44th General Hospital operated with 1,500 beds under tents at this central Leyte location. The unit cared for casualties from Leyte, Mindanao, Mindoro, Luzon and all the other islands in the Philippine area. Col. Einar R. Daniels, Milwaukee; Col. Peter A. Midelfart, Eau Claire; Major Jackman Pyre, Madison, and Capt. Harold J. Tausend, Madison, were on detached service in Luzon. While there they performed in a manner that reflected most favorably upon their home unit and for this service each was awarded the Bronze Star medal.

In December, 1944, the landing fields near the hospital were abandoned because of unpredictable and unseasonal weather conditions and highly unsuitable terrain. Casualties came in then by land. In June, 1945, the hospital moved from Burauen in central Leyte to a site on the Leyte Gulf where the prefabricated buildings of GHQ were made into a 1,500 bed hospital.

No record of the 44th General Hospital would be complete without commendation of the nurses staff which served the unit. No finer group of women could possibly have been brought together. Their entire deportment was of such high calibre as to deserve the praise and recognition of the nursing profession and all womanhood.

In the same fashion, the corpsmen—enlisted medical personnel—performed a monumental service to the hospital. Few had even the barest knowledge of medical care before they entered the armed forces, yet they performed like veterans. Their lot was not easy, but their service is measured by their help in saving countless lives.

The night of August 10, 1945, when the Japanese made their first offer of capitulation, was a memorable one for the 44th General Hospital personnel as they saw the lights on Leyte harbor for the first time. It was on this date that plans were started to return the members of the 44th General Hospital unit to civilian life after playing a gallant role in the winning of the war in the Pacific.

32nd Division Medical Units

On October 15, 1940 a bugle was heard to sound an unfamiliar series of notes. What was the meaning of that call? Word soon passed around that it was the call to arms—National Guardsmen were to be activated into federal service. The responsibilities, and the headaches, of the medical department of the 32nd Division began anew.

Twenty-three years to the day after it was first constituted on October 15, 1917, the 32nd Division called its medical units to action. This time the medical groups gathered in their respective towns large and small. After several days of drills and instructions at home, the men boarded trains with Louisiana as the destination. When training began at Camp Beauregard, La., in late October, 1940, at least 15 Wisconsin physicians were serving the division.

Major Harry H. Heiden, Sheboygan, commanded the medical detachment of the 107th Quartermaster Regiment, ably assisted by "rookie" Captain James W. Ferris, Appleton. Captain Clement J. Moran arrived from La Crosse with his 120th Field Artillery Regimental Medical Detachment. He was assisted by Captain Chalmer Davee, River Falls. Incidentally, the U. S. Army almost didn't want "Timmy" Moran. He quickly had a small hernia repaired so that he could pass federal inspection.

Milwaukee men were well represented. Major Harold Nebel brought down his 121st Field Artillery Regiment Medical Detachment aided by First Lieutenant Richard Muenzer. Major Stanley W. Hollenbeck arrived commanding the Medical Detachment of the 126th Field Artillery Regiment (formerly the 105th Cavalry unit), and he was aided by Captain Anthony J. Schramel.

Major Sylvester Zintek of Milwaukee, commanding the Medical Detachment of the 127th Infantry Regiment, had the assistance of Captain Louis Nowack, Watertown, Lieutenant Bernie Fein, Milwaukee, and Lieutenant Herbert Schields, Milwaukee. Major George J. Hathaway traveled from 'way up in Superior to 'way down in Louisiana commanding the 128th Infantry Regiment Medical Detachment. He was assisted by Lieutenant Herbert Christianson, Superior, now Lt. Col. Christianson, Division Surgeon of the new 32nd Division, and Lt. Edward Leveroos.

The Division was trained and toughened by three months of maneuvers in Louisiana and two months in the Carolinas. Sick call and unit training soon became routine for the medicos and kitchen and latrine inspection along with Saturday unit inspections became more or less a chore.

Then came Pearl Harbor. Leaves were cancelled—attitudes and training assumed a new seriousness. Hustle and bustle. Hurry up and wait. The division went to Fort Devens slated for a trip to Ireland, but there was an abrupt change in plans. Within six weeks the troop trains were rolling toward the West Coast. The 32nd barely paused at San Francisco, loaded onto transports and after a 22-day voyage arrived in Adelaide, South Australia, on May 12, 1942. Camps were immediately established and the 32nd assumed combat conditions.

During the rains wounded men sometimes drowned in flash-flooded areas before litter bearers could find them. Malaria, dengue fever and scrub typhus increased and the torrential rains were so constant hardly anyone was ever dry. Jungle rot attacked almost everyone around the feet, arms, chest and armpits.

The field hospitals and aid stations were not uncommon targets for the enemy even though clearly marked. On one occasion, exactly a year after Pearl Harbor, the Japanese raided the 32nd's major field hospital with a large force of planes. Although the bombers repeatedly strafed and hit the tent hospital the doctors continued to care for the casualties on the operating tables at the time. Anesthetists and corpsmen stuck to their posts.

Despite all these difficulties the fact that the morale of the 32nd Division troops improved rapidly is certainly some measure of tribute to the calm efficiency of its medical corps.

The 32nd rushed through further training while the Japanese clawed southward toward Australia. The medicos were still impatient with the somewhat un-medical routine. New medical personnel was added, some went to different units, and in the fall of 1942, the 32nd Division was off to New Guinea.

At Port Moresby and other points in New Guinea the 32nd medical men became reacquainted with more Wisconsin doctors. Sections of Col. William Bleckwenn's 135th Medical Regiment were scattered about New Guinea and Australia. Among them were Col. Leo Peterson, Major Reinhard Becker, Capt. Sid Eagleburger, Capt. Wilmer Christiansen, Capt. James Miller, Col. Marc Musser, Capt. John O'D. McCabe, Lt. Bob Haukohl, Lt. Phil Wilkinson, Capt. Leo Boxer, Capt. Ed Vetter, Capt. John Thanos and Capt. Thurman Kendall.

The Buna campaign was the first test for the 32nd Division and its medical contingent. It was a desperate battle, with the GIs learning that they had to fight not only a crafty and capable enemy but diseases and the jungle as well. Malaria, dengue, typhus dropped men faster than Jap bullets. Dysentery took its toll. Men slept and ate and fought in constant dampness. The Japanese garrison was annihilated but the 32nd's price was also high.

Through all of this the medical department carried on with flying colors. A prodigiously difficult job under the most adverse conditions was very ably carried out by the doctors and their invaluable medical soldiers. The battle was a baptism of fire for most of the Division. For the doctors it was a baptism in war medicine. The greatest task, saving lives and giving the best of medical service, was carried out with dispatch. Training at Carlisle Barracks, army medical training center in Pennsylvania, had added little to the medical military acumen. In New Guinea all were on their own. Guts, hard work, intelligence and ingenuity won out over the Japanese and the elements.

After 117 days of fighting in equatorial jungles, the 32nd retired to Australia for "rest and rehabilitation." The malaria cases were segregated. With better food, continued medical care and rest the 32nd was re-welded into a fighting unit. Then they were off again, this time to Goodenough Island. In spearhead after spearhead the 32nd led the way as General MacArthur's offensive tempo mounted.

On the second day of the year 1944 the 32nd made the first beach landing in the New Guinea campaign at Saidor, and began what was to be a year-and-a-half of almost constant combat. From there it was a series of Gargantuan strides on the island-hopping road to Japan—Aitape, Driniumor River, Hollandia, Morotai, Leyte, Luzon.

When the word of Japan's surrender came to the mountains of northern Luzon on August 15, 1945, it was the 32nd Division's 654th day of combat in World War II. It was 40 months and 5 days since the 32nd had sailed through the Golden Gate. It was a story of great military accomplishment—and a tribute to medical achievement that kept the men of the 32nd Division in the fight all the way.

The Wisconsin medical men, ably assisted by others from all parts of the country, upheld the heroism and ability that others before them had shown since time immemorial. Members of the State Medical Society of Wisconsin may take justifiable pride in the splendid record of the physicians who served the 32nd. Men of the 135th Medical Group, now reactivated as a part of the Red Arrow division, may likewise be prided for the brilliant chapter they have added to the history of the 32nd Division.

135th Medical Group

The 135th Medical Regiment was sired by the Wisconsin medical units which formed the major part of the 107th Sanitary Train in the first World War's 32nd Division. It was born when the National Guard provisions of the Defense Act of 1920 became operative in Wisconsin. For nineteen years it functioned as a five-company corps or army unit with its headquarters and service platoon and Hospital Company H in Madison, Ambulance Company D and Hospital Company G in Milwaukee, Ambulance Company E in Waupun, and the band platoon in Marshfield. In October, 1940, Collecting Companies A and B were organized in Racine.

The 135th was inducted into Federal Service on January 13, 1941 and shortly thereafter moved to Camp Shelby, Mississippi, for training with the 37th and 38th Divisions. By the end of April enough selectees, mostly from Wisconsin, had been added to increase the ten-company regiment to over 1,000 men and officers.

On the heels of Pearl Harbor the regiment lost almost a third of its personnel who volunteered to form the medical detachments of the Caribbean Task Force protecting the Dutch Islands of Curacao and Aruba. Personnel thus lost were replaced by highly trained men from the national guard medical regiments of the Indiana and Kentucky 38th and the Connecticut 43rd Divisions.

On March 4, the 135th took its last look at U. S. shores in New York Harbor, sailed down the Atlantic, through the West Indies, across the Caribbean to Panama, in company with the aircraft carrier "Hornet" on her way to pick up Doolittle's men for the bombardment of Tokyo. After thirty seven days aboard transports it debarked in Brisbane, Australia, on April 6 and was temporarily assigned to the Service of Supply. Within two short months the regiment was scattered by battalions, companies, platoons, or details from Melbourne in Victoria, to Batchelor Field, Pine Creek, and Birdum in the Northern Territory, and Brisbane, Townsville, Cooktown, Coen and Mareeba in Queensland. In New Guinea there was a provisional battalion in Port Moresby and a detachment in Milne Bay. This latter unit participated actively as the only American medical unit in this first decisive defeat of the enemy in the Pacific War.

Gradually, during the East Indies, Papuan and finally by the end of the New Guinea Campaign most of the units were withdrawn from the Australian mainland. At the start of the Admiralties Campaign eight of the companies had been returned to regimental control. They were in service with the Sixth Army land units and Fifth Air Force units scattered from Moresby and Milne Bay on the south and east all the way around New Guinea to Biak and Wakde on the Northwest.

Meanwhile, all the other medical regiments in the U. S. Army had been broken up. The 135th was to have the honor of being the army's last medical regiment since it was not until July, 1944 that it was finally reorganized as the 135th Medical Group. This explains why from October 1943 until the end of the war not a single one of its units was ever even temporarily inactivated for recuperative, recreational or reorganizational purposes.

In the Leyte Campaign the Group was entrusted with field hospitalization and transport, but also had complete responsibility for all evacuation off the islands by land, sea and air.

This responsibility was still further enlarged in the Luzon Campaign when the planning and operation of the most extensive program of air evacuation the Army ever employed was confided to the 135th Medical Group. Employing four radio detachments attached to Group and the three medical battalion headquarters and the whole air commando group of Stenson L-5B small plane squadrons, casualties were picked up daily at each divisional F. A. observation airstrip and transported to the medical battalion holding stations for ambulance transfer to nearby hospitals or by heavier aircraft to more distant or even off-the-island-installations in Leyte, New Guinea or the Peleliu Islands.

The Luzon Campaign expanded the 135th to almost three times its original size—twenty-six units and over 3,000 medical personnel—probably the greatest aggregation of medical troops in history ever to function under a single command. By V-J Day the plans for the invasion of Japan were far enough advanced to have committed the 135th to the medical support of all the divisions of the Marine Corps, an operation which was to have enlarged the group to more than forty units and over 5,000 men.

Service with the Marine Corps would have been nothing new to the 135th. While the early campaigns in the Pacific were slow and the regimental units were mostly in support of the Fifth Air Force at the start, as the land war picked up speed, the regimental, and later the group, units were attached to or in direct support of elements of the 112th Cavalry and the 158th Infantry Regimental Combat Teams as well as the 1st Cavalry, the 1st and 3rd Marines, the 11th Airborne, the 6th, 7th, 24th, 25th, 31st, 32nd, 33rd, 37th, 38th, 40th, 41st, and the 43rd Infantry Divisions. By the beginning of the Philippine Campaign the scattered elements of the regiment and group could point with justifiable pride to more than forty geographical locations where they had been engaged in support of combat forces, or stationed for more or less lengthy periods, largely "holding the fort" until the arrival of more permanent hospitalization.

Companies B & G and a battalion headquarters were awarded the Distinguished Unit Medal for service in the advance phases of the Papuan Campaign. Marine General Rupertus cited Company A for its aggressive action with his 3rd Marines in New Britain.

The 135th Medical Group was inactivated on January 31 in 1946 at Nagoya, Japan. By its reactivation as the medical battalion of the 32nd Division its standards and campaign streamers as well as the record of its achievements became part of the heritage of Wisconsin's historic Red Arrow Division.

MEN WITH GOD—ROBERT BENNEY

by The Rev. ANSELM M. KEEFE, Chaplain, 135th Medical Group

R

EST! Aesculpian who once
The stethoscope, the lancet and the gown
Laid by, . . . forsook familiar round of home
And hospital, . . . to wear caducei.
Slow paced the anxious days and the restless hours
In camp or mimic warfare while you hoped
For quick return to unforgotten ways, . . .
Impatient prayed for something worth to do.
Octopic tentacles of precedent
Enmeshed and paralyzed unmartial thought.
"To hurry and to wait!" Oh God, once more
To live civilian crowded days, . . . forget
The rigid grooves of military rote.
"Alert! At last, the real thing," you sighed,
Anticipating toil, not bootless dreams,
Found still the days of dull delay, the hours
Nostalgic, ceaseless heartaches; stalled
On native soil, the deep, or alien strand.
Your labors at your purposed task were few.
With ictus catastrophic came too soon
The destined call, hard Fate incongruous mocked
The doctor gone to war, whose life should be
To mend the ailing frames and hearts of men,
Fan back the flickering spark of life, . . . above
All men, co-worker with creating God.
Man's inhumanity, like Aztec priest
Of yore, tore out your living heart and cast
It quivering, to the ravening god of war.
With eyes gone dim, your fingers clutched at naught;
To other hands the unerring scalpel fell.
Rest then, . . . your work in life is done. Of men
You had the most to give, and gave yet more
When giving thus life's years in sacrifice.
May He Who giveth His beloved rest
Accept the life thus spilled, catch every drop
In brimming cup, and all the heavenly host
Of sainted surgeons, Cosmas, Damian, Luke,
Make place for you beside the Eternal Throne.

★ LIEUTENANT COMMANDER G. WILLIAM FOX

Doctor Fox was a member of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Assn.

The Aircraft Carrier U. S. S. Franklin was nearing Kobe, Japan, on March 19, 1945 and she was in trouble. The ship was under heavy attack and burning fiercely.

At his battle station far below decks, Lt. Cmdr. G. William Fox, Milwaukee, remained at work in the sick bay and continued to treat casualties until he finally succumbed to the dense smoke in the room. In recognition of this act of heroism, the Navy Cross was awarded posthumously to Doctor Fox.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin and of Rush Medical College in 1930, Doctor Fox was commissioned in the Navy on Aug. 17, 1942 as a lieutenant. Prior to that time he had practiced surgery in Milwaukee and was a member of the staff of Milwaukee Hospital and Milwaukee Children's Hospital.

Until the autumn of 1943 he served at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Great Lakes, Ill., and at the Officer Procurement office in Chicago. He was then assigned to the commissioning party of the U. S. S. Franklin. During eighteen months of duty in the Pacific Ocean area, Doctor Fox won six battle campaign stars and the Purple Heart for injury in action during the Fall of 1944 before losing his life off the coast of Japan.

He was survived by his wife, Elsie, three children, William, Richard and Mary, his mother, Mrs. G. W. Fox, two sisters and three brothers.

★ LIEUTENANT ADRIAN W. FRANKOW

Doctor Frankow was a member of the Washington-Ozaukee County Medical Society, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Assn.

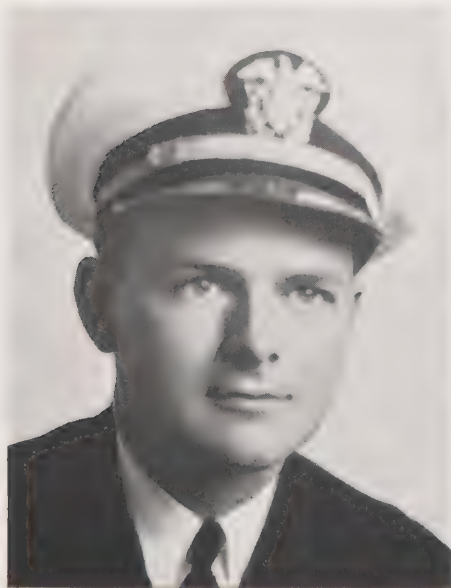

A graduate of Marquette University School of Medicine in 1933, Doctor Adrian W. Frankow, West Bend, took his internship at Evangelical Deaconess Hospital, Milwaukee, and later began practice in association with his brother, Dr. Raymond Frankow, in West Bend.

In January, 1942, Doctor Frankow was commissioned in the army medical corps and reported for duty in June as a lieutenant. His first assignment was Fort George Wright, Washington. Later he was placed in charge of the surgical staff at Ephrada, Washington. After promotion to flight surgeon Lieutenant Frankow was sent to Randolph Field, Texas, for flight survey training and was graduated with honors.

He was then transferred to an Army Air Base at Santa Ana, California, later to Salt Lake City, Utah, and finally to Biggs Field, El Paso, Texas, where he was assigned to the 389th Bomb Group.

Just as he was about to be assigned to overseas duty, Lieutenant Frankow became ill and was confined to the William Beaumont General Hospital, El Paso, Texas. In April, 1943, Lieutenant Frankow was sent home on sick leave and placed on inactive duty until his death on August 10, 1943. He was survived by his wife, Myrtle, New York City, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Frankow, West Bend, and a brother.

★ LIEUTENANT (J. G.) ROBERT C. GAVIN

Doctor Gavin held membership in the Fond du Lac County Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Assn.

On the campus of the University of Wisconsin the Robert C. Gavin House, a men's dormitory unit, honors a man whose "extraordinary personal charm, understanding and emotional balance gained him the confidence of the men in his house and the respect of men in the Residence Halls."

On an island base in the Pacific the Bob Gavin Theater was built in 1945 by his former comrades in the 23rd Naval Construction Battalion who dedicated the theater in memory of "the doctor's untiring efforts and regard for the welfare of his men and officers."

Lieutenant (j. g.) Gavin was lost on December 18, 1944, when the Destroyer U. S. S. Monaghan capsized during a typhoon off the coast of Luzon, Philippine Islands.

Doctor Gavin was a graduate of Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., and the University of Wisconsin Medical School in 1943. On January 10, 1944, he began active duty at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Norman, Oklahoma. He was later assigned to the U. S. S. Monaghan in Adm. Halsey's Third Fleet in the South Pacific, on duty out of the Twelfth Naval District, San Francisco.

Lieutenant Gavin had participated in five campaigns in the Pacific Theater and was authorized to wear the American Theater and Asiatic-Pacific ribbons with five battle stars.

He was survived by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen E. Gavin, Fond du Lac, a brother, Stephen, Jr., and a sister, Mary.

★ CAPTAIN ANTHONY J. GRAMLING

Dr. Gramling was a member of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Assn.

Although severely injured in an enemy attack on the Third Battalion, Sixth Armored Infantry Regiment, Battalion Surgeon Captain Gramling refused to be evacuated. In a subsequent attack his aid station was under heavy bombardment, but despite the pain of injury, Captain Gramling continued to care for the wounded, until he was killed by a direct hit. For this gallant action in Italy he was posthumously awarded the Silver Star. Doctor Gramling was the first Milwaukee doctor to die in action.

Thus did Doctor and Mrs. Henry J. Gramling, Milwaukee, learn how their son gave his life for his country on January 10, 1944—the first Milwaukee doctor to die in action.

Doctor Gramling was a graduate of Marquette University School of Medicine in 1939. He interned at Wayne County Hospital, Detroit, and was a resident physician at Columbia and Children's Hospitals, Milwaukee, before entering service.

He was commissioned a First Lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps on February 12, 1942, and after serving briefly at Fort Knox, Ky., went to Ireland in June, 1942 and later to England. He took part in the North Africa Invasion, landing at Oran. He survived eight major engagements in North Africa and was cited for "extraordinary and meritorious service under fire" in caring for and evacuating the wounded in the battle of Kasserine Pass. Later he was promoted to captain and took part in the Anzio Beach landing in Italy.

Survivors include his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Gramling, Dousman; a sister, Dr. Frances Hughson; and three brothers.

★ FIRST LIEUTENANT T. DWIGHT HUNT

Doctor Hunt held membership in the Dane County Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Assn.

Lieutenant T. Dwight Hunt, Madison, was killed in an airplane crash on a routine flight from an Army Air Base at Pueblo, Colorado, on January 24, 1943.

Lieutenant Hunt was a graduate of the University of Oregon Medical School in 1935 and was licensed to practice medicine in Wisconsin in 1940. He was commissioned to active duty as a First Lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the United States Army Air Corps on September 1, 1942. His first assignment was with the Medical Detachment at Selfridge Field, Michigan.

A month after entering service, Lieutenant Hunt was assigned to the 379th Service Squadron at Pendleton Field, Oregon. Later he was attached to the Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron, 83rd Service Group, at the same air base. In the latter part of November, 1942, Lieutenant Hunt was named Group Surgeon for the 83rd Service Group and was transferred to Pueblo, Colorado with this unit early in January, 1943. He had been in the Air Corps only five months when he met his death.

Lieutenant Hunt was survived by his father, the Reverend George Hunt, Madison, and his wife, Mary, and two children, also of Madison.

★ SQUADRON LEADER J. GRANT MacKENZIE

Doctor MacKenzie had been a member of the Dane County Medical Society, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Assn.

A flight to check his findings in research on aviation medicine resulted in the death of Squadron Leader J. Grant MacKenzie, Madison, when his plane crashed near Gander, Newfoundland, on September 5, 1943.

A Canadian by birth, Squadron Leader MacKenzie was a graduate of the School of Medicine, University of Toronto, in 1936. He interned for two years at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, took a three-year postgraduate course at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, and graduated in 1941 from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, New York City. His research work in otolaryngology at Columbia was considered "a vast contribution to medical science."

He later pursued his studies in Philadelphia and finally assumed a position as eye, ear, nose and throat specialist in Madison.

Shortly after the outbreak of the war, Doctor MacKenzie returned to Canada to join the Royal Canadian Air Force on July 6, 1942 as a Flight Lieutenant. He attended the School of Aviation Medicine and was assigned to St. Thomas Technical Training School as a surgeon. On December 8, 1942 he went to Toronto No. 6, Initial Training School, where he began work as a consultant. At the time of his death he was conducting experimental tests for the Atlantic convoy service.

Surviving him were his wife, Alice, and a daughter, now residing at Thamesford, Ontario, Canada.

★ LIEUTENANT COMMANDER WALTER MAUTHE, JR.

Doctor Mauthe was a member of the Walworth County Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Assn.

Shortly after his return to Milwaukee from more than two years service in the South Pacific, Lt. Commander Walter Mauthe, Jr., died from the effects of a heart ailment and malaria contracted in the service.

Doctor Mauthe was graduated from Marquette University School of Medicine in 1932 and practiced in Whitewater, Wisconsin, where he had his own clinic. He received a commission with the rank of Lieutenant Senior Grade on October 8, 1942 and was assigned to duty at the Navy Yard Dispensary, Puget Sound, Bremerton, Washington. He served five months in Helena, Montana, as chief navy medical examiner at a Naval Recruiting Station before going overseas in August 1943. He spent twenty-five months in the New Hebrides Islands as medical officer for Base Hospital No. 2; Navy Hospital No. 136; Marine Hospital No. 140 and Seabee Detachment No. 1007.

He was promoted to Lieutenant Commander on September 1, 1945 and returned to the United States early in October. After a tour of duty at the Great Lakes Naval Separation Center, Great Lakes, Illinois, Doctor Mauthe was placed on terminal leave.

Survivors include his wife, Marie Rolfs, Milwaukee, three sons, David, Walter III and William, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mauthe, Sr., a brother, Dr. Howard Mauthe, and a sister, Esther.

★ FIRST LIEUTENANT WILLIAM H. MILLMANN

Doctor Millmann was a member of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Assn.

On February 21, 1945, First Lieutenant William H. Millmann, Milwaukee, gave his life on Mount Belvedere, Italy, when he left cover under heavy German artillery and mortar fire to give aid to a wounded soldier. The president of the United States recognized this gallant deed by posthumously awarding him the Silver Star and Purple Heart.

Doctor Millmann received his A. B. degree from Marquette University, and in October, 1943 was graduated from the Marquette University School of Medicine. His record there was one of outstanding scholarship, deep loyalty and distinguished service to the university. He was a member of the editorial staff of the Marquette Medical Review; member of Phi Chi Medical Fraternity; was listed in the 1943-4 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges; and was appointed to Alma Sigma Nu, Jesuit Honor Society, which is the highest honor obtainable for a male student at Marquette.

After completing his internship at St. Mary's Hospital, Milwaukee, Doctor Millmann was commissioned to the Army Medical Corps as a First Lieutenant. He received military training at the 58th Officers Training Battalion, Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania; and Moore General Hospital, Swannanoa, North Carolina. He joined the 87th Mountain Infantry, 10th Division, 3rd Battalion, at Camp Swift, Texas, in November, 1944 and went overseas in January, 1945. He was a Battalion Surgeon at the time of his death in Italy.

He was survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Millmann, and a sister, Margaret, all of Milwaukee.

★ LIEUTENANT (J. G.) EDWIN R. NELSON

After surviving Japanese raids on the Philippines, the Battle of Bataan, the fall of Corregidor and many months in an enemy prison camp near Manila, Lieutenant Edwin R. Nelson, Madison, was killed about December 15, 1944, at Subic Bay while being transported via ship to Japan. His heroic actions during various phases of the Philippine campaigns won him the Legion of Merit, Silver Star, Purple Heart and Bronze Star.

Lieutenant Nelson was a native of West Virginia and graduated from the Medical College of Virginia in 1936. He served an internship at Logan General Hospital, Logan, West Virginia, then came to Wisconsin where he was resident physician in the orthopedic hospital from July 1, 1937 to July 1, 1939.

Doctor Nelson entered the military service on January 3, 1941 as a lieutenant (j.g.) in the U. S. Naval Reserve. He later joined the Asiatic fleet hospital corps at San Diego, California, and went to the Philippines in July, 1941.

In April, 1942 Lieutenant Nelson was cited for his bravery in operating at a Bataan base hospital while the hospital was being subjected to a rain of bombs from Japanese planes.

Lieutenant Nelson is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Nelson, Huntington, West Virginia; a brother and two sisters.

★ LIEUTENANT ARIE C. REMPE

Doctor Arie C. Rempe, Cassville, was a graduate of Rush Medical College in 1936. He began his practice in Cassville in 1937 and continued there until June 17, 1942 when he was commissioned a Lieutenant in the United States Navy.

Called to active duty in July, 1942, Lieutenant Rempe was assigned to the U. S. Naval Hospital, Great Lakes, Illinois. During the whole of 1943 he served as senior medical officer at the U. S. Naval Training School (Signals), at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois.

In January, 1944 he was assigned to sea duty in the Pacific war zone with the South Pacific Task Force. While at sea he was taken ill and returned to the United States for hospitalization. He was on inactive duty at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Oakland, California, when he died on June 28, 1944.

Survivors include his wife, Wilma, a daughter, Ellen, both of Pella, Iowa, and his mother, Mrs. Henry Rempe, Leighton, Iowa.

★ MAJOR ALBERT A. TOUSIGNANT

Doctor Tousignant was a member of the Oconto Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Assn.

Major Albert A. Tousignant, Oconto, a prisoner of the Japanese for more than two years, was the victim of an Allied submarine sinking of an unmarked Japanese prison ship during October, 1945.

Doctor Tousignant was commissioned as Captain in the Army Medical Corps on March 17, 1941, and trained at Ft. Bliss, Texas. He was captured in the fall of Manila in January, 1942, and no word was received of him until March 17, 1943, when he was reported a Japanese prisoner of war in Camp Cabanatuan on Luzon.

A year after his death, Major Tousignant was awarded the Legion of Merit and citation stating that "during the infamous March out of Bataan, he rendered personal services to fellow prisoners of war to an extent beyond what could be naturally expected of him and that by his leadership and good example contributed enormously to the morale and physical well-being of those with whom he was associated; and these actions were often rendered in the face of resistance on the part of the Japanese." Major Tousignant had also been awarded the Purple Heart.

He graduated from Marquette University School of Medicine in 1924 and practiced in Milwaukee for a time.

Survivors include his wife, Helen, and a daughter, Rosanne, of Oconto; his father, the late George Tousignant; a sister, Isabel, Milwaukee, and a brother.

★ MAJOR THOMAS E. WYATT

Doctor Wyatt had been a member of the Wood County Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Assn.

After 39 months of service in the European Theater, Major Thomas E. Wyatt, Marshfield, died while enroute to Welch Convalescent Hospital, Daytona Beach, Florida, on August 12, 1945.

Doctor Wyatt entered the armed forces as a member of the Medical Reserve Corps in October, 1940. He went into active duty during November, 1940 as a First Lieutenant at the Station Hospital, Camp Beauregard, Louisiana. For nearly a year he was assigned to the Station Hospital, Camp Livingston, Louisiana.

He was operating surgeon with the first task force to land in northern Ireland in 1942 and later was with advance units of the 41st Evacuation Hospital in England, Normandy, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. He served with the First and Ninth Armies.

Major Wyatt returned to the United States as a patient with 39 months of overseas service to his credit. He was entitled to wear the American Defense, American Theater and European Theater ribbons with four bronze battle stars. He had been awarded the Bronze Star and citations from the King of England and General Montgomery.

Major Wyatt was graduated from Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, Nashville, Tennessee in 1935. He was survived by his wife, Pauline, and his mother, Mrs. Thomas Wyatt, Sr., Franklin, Tennessee.

COLONEL B. J. BIRK, Army

Granted B. S. Degree from the University of Indiana and M. D. from Rush Medical College in 1917. Took postgraduate work at University of Chicago and University of Vienna.

Commissioned from Milwaukee on April 12, 1942 as Major in Army Medical Corps. Served as Chief of Medicine and Post Consultant, Fort Sheridan, Ill.; attended Command and General Staff School, Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.; went overseas about Jan. 1, 1944 as surgeon with the 62nd Liaison Group attached to the Chinese Combat Command in fighting at Kweilin, Changsha, Henyang, Chaun Shien and Luichow. When discharged on April 15, 1946, Colonel Birk wore the American, European and Asiatic-Pacific theater ribbons with three bronze battle stars; the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster; Special Breast Order, Chinese Cloud and Banner; China Resistance Medal, Combat Medical Award and Victory Medal.

Doctor Birk died on June 28, 1947 at Thiensville. He had been a member of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Association. He was survived by his wife, Ruth, and a daughter, Jae, of Thiensville, and two sisters and a brother.

CAPTAIN IRVIN A. IHRKE, Army

Attended Oshkosh State Teachers College, received A. B. degree from University of Chicago and obtained his M. D. in 1933 at Rush Medical College. Interned at Oak Park, Ill., and after coming to Oshkosh was appointed city physician from 1935 to 1938.

Commissioned from Oshkosh on July 21, 1942 as Captain in Army Medical Corps. Served overseas from Sept., 1942 to Dec., 1945; Company B, 115th Medical Bn., Hawaiian Islands, Guadalcanal, New Britain, New Caledonia, Espiritu Santo, Mona, Treasury Islands; 52nd Field Hospital, second battle of Bougainville; 29th Evacuation Hospital, Luzon, P. I. and Yamagata, Japan. When discharged on March 20, 1946 he wore the American Theater ribbon, Asiatic-Pacific Theater ribbon with 4 battle stars and one invasion arrowhead; Philippine Liberation ribbon with 1 battle star; Purple Heart for wounds received in action on Luzon; Combat Medical Badge; Meritorious Unit Badge and Victory Medal, and six overseas service bars.

Captain Ihrke died on December 4, 1946, after being in ill health from the time of his release from service the previous March. He was a member of the Winnebago County Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Association. Survivors included his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ihrke, Oshkosh, a son, Charles, Rush Lake, and three brothers.

MAJOR ROBERT G. MAYER, Army

Graduate of University of Wisconsin School of Pharmacy, 1936; Medical School, 1941. Interned at City Hospital, Cleveland, Ohio.

Commissioned from Kaukauna as First Lieutenant in August, 1942. Served at Fort Custer, Mich.; Camp Phillips, Kansas; and Camp McCain, Miss.; went overseas in June, 1944, with 121st Medical Battalion, American Division and served at Bougainville, Solomon Islands; Cebu, Leyte and Biri, Philippine Islands and Tokyo, Japan; 71st and 99th Evacuation Hospitals at Tokyo and Usonomiya, Japan.

Cited for meritorious service during invasion of Biri Island, Philippines, for "attending the wounded with speed and calmness and saving many lives while under intense enemy fire."

When discharged April 16, 1946, Major Mayer wore the American Theater ribbon; Asiatic-Pacific ribbon with 2 battle stars and an invasion arrowhead, the Philippine Liberation ribbon with one battle star; the Bronze Star, Combat Medical Badge.

At the time of his death on April 1, 1947, Doctor Mayer was resident physician at the Veterans Hospital, Wood. Doctor Mayer was a member of the Outagamie County Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Association. He was survived by his parents, Doctor and Mrs. E. A. time he wore the American Theater ribbon and Victory Medal. When Doctor Forman returned from the service he was in ill health and set up practice in Milwaukee. His death occurred on March 15, 1945 in Milwaukee. He was survived by his wife and two daughters.

Doctor Forman had been a member of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Association.

CAPTAIN BYRLTON D. LOHMILLER, Army

Captain Byrlton D. Lohmiller, Madison, received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1939 and his doctor of medicine in 1942 from the University of Wisconsin Medical School. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

He interned at Madison General Hospital and after practicing in Madison for nearly a year was commissioned a First Lieutenant in the United States Army Air Corps on August 12, 1943.

Doctor Lohmiller's first assignment was the station hospital at Amarillo Army Air Field, Amarillo, Texas. Later he was transferred to Keesler Field, Station Hospital, Keesler Field, Mississippi, and promoted to rank of Captain in November, 1944.

After serving for more than fourteen months in the air forces, Captain Lohmiller was accidentally drowned while swimming near Biloxi, Mississippi, on April 3, 1946. He was survived by his wife, Esther, and daughter, Mary Esther, of Madison.

Doctor Lohmiller was a member of the Dane County Medical Society, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin and the American Medical Association.

*R*ace Against Death

No account of the medical history of World War II would be complete without high tribute to the medical corpsmen, commonly known to G. I.s as "first aid" men, and to "angels of mercy", the nurses.

The medical corpsmen were often the first to reach the wounded soldier—sometimes performing amazing feats of heroism to bring patients off the battlefield to places of treatment. In less spectacular roles as aides to physicians in camps, posts and hospitals, these men made tremendous contributions to the saving of the health and lives of America's fighting forces.

For those who had need of the ministrations of the nurses there are not enough words to express their gratitude and admiration for the task these women performed throughout the war. Few contributed more to the relief of suffering than the corps of nurses who worked side by side with physicians, corpsmen and fighting men on every battlefield. Unheralded, but quietly dramatic, too, was their role in hospitals and laboratories far removed from the battlefield where they saved lives with microscopes and restored health with good nursing care.

*M*edical Services on the "Home Front"

P rocurement and Assignment

The story of how the doctors of Wisconsin decided among themselves who should go to war and who should remain at home provides an interesting insight into the tremendous task of providing for both the civilian and military health in time of war.

As early as 1939 there was discussion about the necessity of a military committee. With little thought that the committee would be a very active one, the Council of the State Medical Society named Dr. Robert E. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee, chairman of an "M" day committee.

When the war clouds assumed more alarming proportions in 1940, the American Medical Association advised each state medical society to appoint a state chairman on medical preparedness. This chairmanship likewise fell to Dr. Fitzgerald. Immediately a survey was conducted to obtain the name, location, qualifications and availability for service of every Wisconsin physician. Within a year the information became of great value, and the task of supplying the military forces with an ever increasing number of physicians while retaining sufficient doctors to maintain health on the home front became the lot of Procurement and Assignment Service of Wisconsin with Dr. Fitzgerald as state consultant and Dr. R. W. Blumenthal, Milwaukee, vice consultant.

Procurement and Assignment Service in Wisconsin was organized under a directing board, a central office in Washington, D. C., a consultant's office in Chicago, and corps area and state committees with local, county, or district committees serving in advisory capacity. Physicians on the various boards and committees gave unselfishly and unstintingly of their time and services. Without compensation, at great personal sacrifice, and at times in spite of uninformed or malicious criticism, these men rendered invaluable and patriotic service to their country in its war effort.

On the policy level, the Service was guided by the Committee on War Participation of the State Medical Society. Its ex-officio members were Dr. F. E. Butler, Menomonie; Dr. R. M. Kurten, Racine; Dr. S. E. Gavin, Fond du Lac; Mr. C. H. Crownhart, Madison; Dr. R. E. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee.

Advice on the medical needs of specific communities was given by the Subcommittee on Replacements which included Drs. R. W. Blumenthal, Milwaukee, chairman; Spencer D. Beebe, Sparta; E. C. Cary, Reedsville; H. A. Sincok, Superior, and A. A. Cantwell, Shawano.

Another subcommittee aided in the same work: Drs. E. J. Carey, Milwaukee, chairman; H. M. Coon, Madison; J. W. Prentice, Ashland; F. X. Pomainville, Wisconsin Rapids, and P. R. Minahan, Green Bay.

Dr. Gunnar Gundersen, La Crosse, was called upon for advice and assistance in problems relating to industrial health. The same kind of aid was given by Dr. W. D. Stovall, Madison, in the field of public health personnel and problems.

Much of the work of the Procurement and Assignment Service was done by the 15 councilors of the State Medical Society who furnished complete information about physician personnel in the entire state. The men who performed this task were:

Drs. A. C. Hough, Beaver Dam; C. E. Pechous, Kenosha; W. T. Clark, Janesville; E. I. Pippin, Richland Center; A. H. Heidner, West Bend; S. E. Gavin, Fond du Lac; H. A. Jegi, Galesville; G. W. Krahn, Oconto Falls; H. H. Christofferson, Colby; R. G. Arveson, Frederic; T. J. O'Leary, Superior; C. W. Eberbach, R. W. Blumenthal, and R. E. Fitzgerald, all of Milwaukee; and J. W. Lambert, Antigo.

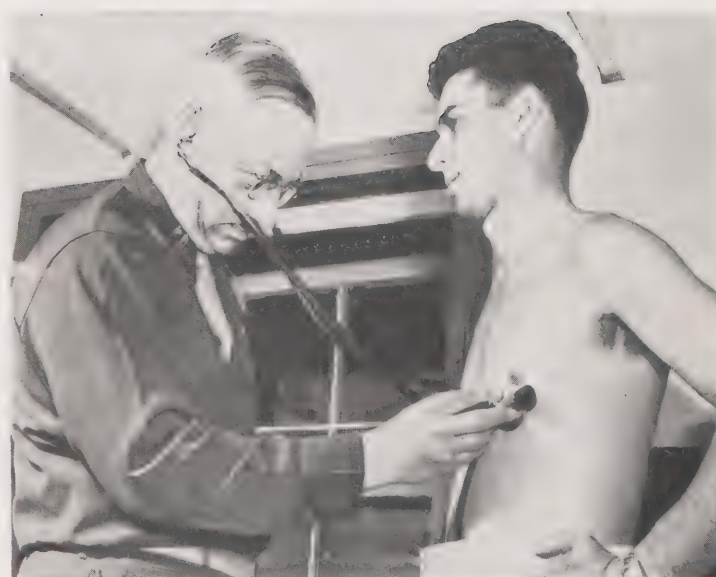

By means of detailed medical manpower surveys of their districts these men recommended which doctors should be considered available for service or essential to his community. Doctors on such committees often had to make decisions that would send their closest friends and partners into the service. The complete fairness in which those cases were decided in the interest of the community welfare is a tribute to the character of members of the profession.

In some cases tremendous pressure was brought to bear upon the councilors to allow a doctor to remain in a certain community. Petitions signed by hundreds of citizens were not uncommon. Hundreds of personal interviews were conducted with civic and industrial leaders, politicians, friends and relatives who were interested in keeping or moving some doctor. The final decision as to whether a doctor went into service or stayed to serve his community at home was always the consensus of the community and never the thought of any one person.

In Milwaukee County, which embraced the largest single group of the medical profession in Wisconsin, the procedure was set up along similar lines. A special committee for Milwaukee county hospitals and institutions included Drs. U. A. Schlueter, E. L. Dallwig, R. W. Blumenthal, Chester Echols, F. R. Janney, Joseph Lettenberger, Charles Fidler, H. W. Sargeant, J. Gurney Taylor, Bernard Schlosman and L. J. Foley.

A special review committee was set up consisting of Drs. R. W. Blumenthal, Carl W. Eberbach, R. E. Fitzgerald, Eben J. Carey and Henry J. Gramling. The War Mobilization Committee of the Medical Society of Milwaukee County consisted of Drs. C. A. Evans, chairman; F. W. Madison, vice-chairman; C. W. Eberbach, John McCabe, L. J. Foley, and C. M. Echols, and Mr. J. O. Kelley, all of Milwaukee; Drs. J. S. Supernaw and C. O. Vingom, Madison; Drs. W. T. Clark, Janesville; C. E. Pechous, Kenosha; A. H. Heidner, West Bend, and A. G. Hough, Beaver Dam. Major John A. Grab, a former Milwaukee physician, was assigned by the army to coordinate Procurement and Assignment Service with Selective Service.

The major function of the Service was to obtain proper and equitable distribution of all physicians, dentists and veterinarians of the state and to designate them as essential in their present capacity or available for assignment to duty elsewhere in civilian, institutional, public health, industrial, government or military agencies for the duration of the war.

This meant moving civilian doctors to places where population increased due to war industry and military installations, to communities left without medical care when their doctors entered service, and to entirely new war-made communities. Many doctors were provided for the Veterans Administration, the U. S. Civil Service Commission and other government agencies.

Still another phase of the Service was a speed-up program of education for student doctors, interns and hospital personnel. By reducing the periods of internship, junior and senior residency from a year to nine months each, the armed forces were supplied more rapidly with well-trained medical men, and hospitals were able to avoid shortages of manpower.

Despite the magnitude of the task confronting Procurement and Assignment Service, the immediate response of Wisconsin physicians to the call of their country was ample proof of their unselfish attitude. At the beginning of the war there were approximately 3,391 licensed physicians in Wisconsin. When V-J day arrived, a total of 1,175 Wisconsin physicians had seen service in World War II. Nineteen of this number gave their lives. The names of these men shall ever be enshrined in the hearts and minds of us all.

With the fall of Germany and the crushing defeat of Japan, the work of Procurement and Assignment took a new turn. Doctors and their former patients suddenly realized that the armed forces no longer needed their services so urgently. The Procurement and Assignment office was flooded with telegrams and letters from doctors, former patients, friends, relatives, civic leaders and politicians requesting immediate release of doctors from service.

The Procurement and Assignment Service endeavored throughout the war to serve two masters—the military forces and the civilian health needs. It performed this task well only because of the splendid loyalty and cooperation of the doctors and the citizens of the state.

DIRECTOR OF SELECTIVE SERVICE

Selective Service

The experience of the first World War made it apparent that men inducted into the armed forces should be given adequate examinations to determine their physical and mental fitness for service. This was accomplished through selective service whose purpose was to secure orderly, just and democratic methods whereby the military manpower of the United States could be made available for training and service in the land, air and naval forces of the United States, with the least possible disruption of the social and economic life of the nation.

Thus, the selective service act of 1940 required that "no man shall be inducted for training and service unless . . . his physical and mental fitness for such training and service has been satisfactorily determined." The law required at least one examining physician in each of the 134 local draft boards in Wisconsin.

Three days before the selective service act was passed, Doctor John A. Grab, Sun Prairie, was designated by the President of the United States to serve as state medical officer for Wisconsin. He was to establish close relations with the army induction center and all examining physicians of the state, to handle all medical problems of selective service and serve as medical administrative advisor to the state director of selective service.

Through the State Medical Society more than 1,000 Wisconsin doctors volunteered to serve as examining physicians without compensation. Their job was not easy. Each such physician had to find his way through a mass of constantly changing requirements, directives, regulations and definitions. As the needs for military personnel became more urgent, the physical requirements were lowered and the doctors had to acquaint themselves with completely new sets of requirements.

Medical advisory boards were organized to make special examinations. The tremendous task of giving serological tests to discover communicable diseases was performed with the cooperation of the United States Public Health Service, State Board of Health and the Wisconsin Psychiatric Institute. Teams of doctors were organized in Milwaukee, Dane, Shawano, Manitowoc and La Crosse counties to expedite the arduous task of examining large groups of men.

Wisconsin was one of the first states to provide induction stations with medical and social information to detect registrants who were mentally or morally unacceptable for service. In World War I a great many men were inducted who were not capable of meeting service conditions and as a result were handicapped or disabled permanently. If they had remained in civilian life they might have led useful lives. Wisconsin doctors sought to prevent a recurrence of this problem by selecting the mentally unfit at the time the registrant appeared before his local draft board.

The physical examinations conducted by doctors of Wisconsin for selective service resulted in the greatest volume of reliable information concerning physical defects and public health ever assembled for the state. While their primary purpose was to determine the acceptability of men for service, the examinations had great value both from the standpoint of medical research and public health programs.

The success of the selective service system stemmed largely from the enthusiastic acceptance of their task by examining physicians as well as from thorough familiarity with continually changing regulations and strict adherence to them. The 1945 state legislature eulogized the effective and equitable administration of state selective service by listing and commending more than 1,000 examining physicians.

Congress in July, 1945, passed an act publicly acknowledging the patriotism of physicians who served on examining boards. Each doctor who served on such a board for two years received a certificate of commendation and a medal for faithful service. Congress said, "Their service has been voluntary and uncompensated and in many cases has resulted in great sacrifices on the part of these citizens."

The doctors who contributed so generously of their time and effort to examine more than 300,000 Wisconsin men for war service assumed an additional burden to their already busy lives. They were not publicly recognized by uniform, rank, or applause of the multitude. They continued their tasks unselfishly, and to them Wisconsin owes a deep debt of gratitude.

The physical examinations conducted by the Selective Service System reawakened America to a realization that the health of its citizens is a national asset.

Civilian Defense

"FLASH!!—Fires raged uncontrolled tonight in Appleton after a flight of enemy bombers loosed a thousand tons of high explosives and incendiaries on the small industrial city. The town was virtually wiped off the map and medical rescue teams reaching the city report thousands of casualties."

Fortunately this news flash was never made in Wisconsin, but it could have been. Throughout the anxious war years the sign of the white triangle in a blue circle was the symbol of protection for the civilian elements of mobilized America. It was the emblem of civilian defense. Emergency Medical Service was a vital part of this defense system. Physicians and nurses serving in emergency medical field units were identified by a red caduceus in the triangle.

Months of detailed planning, cooperation, indoctrination, hurried recruiting and training of volunteers and the expenditure of thousands of dollars for medical supplies perfected civilian defense plans to the point that they could have been placed in operation moments after a disaster. But the tide of aggression was turned from our doors before its force could be felt at home.

Emergency Medical Service got underway in Wisconsin in early 1942 under the direction of Dr. R. E. Fitzgerald, Milwaukee, first state chief of Emergency Medical Service. His Advisory Committee included Drs. J. S. Supernaw, Madison; V. E. Ekblad, Superior; T. C. Hemmingsen, Racine; F. G. Anderson, Eau Claire and A. G. Koehler, Oshkosh.

At that time Doctor Fitzgerald said, "Detailed planning for Emergency Medical Service is vital to the protection and welfare of our people in time of war."

Dr. Supernaw became state chief of Emergency Medical Service when Dr. Fitzgerald took over the job of procurement and assignment of physicians in May, 1943. Paper planning developed into well-organized medical units poised for action.

County "M-Day" chairmen cooperated quickly and fully. Local chiefs of Emergency Medical Service were named. They were responsible for the preparation and promotion of medical plans for civilian protection from enemy action, preservation of public morale and proper distribution of medical supplies and equipment.

Control rooms were established in key cities throughout the state. When alerted they were manned by the local chiefs of every department of civilian defense. Casualties, fires and other catastrophes were to be reported to these centers and the chiefs would dispatch the necessary personnel and equipment to the scene of the disaster.

More than 3,000 units of blood plasma were available for the primary target center under the system. Courses for civilian doctors were started to train them in medical aspects of gas warfare and chemical agents. Mock air raids and blackouts were held to simulate emergency conditions.

Portable first aid and casualty unit developed

Control panel designating location of "casualties" during a mock air raid.

Racine county claimed the first mobile casualty station in Wisconsin. It was a huge streamlined truck carrying stretchers, splints, tables, and a large supply of pharmaceutical, surgical and medical supplies. Donated by H. F. Johnson of S. C. Johnson & Sons, Inc., for the duration, this truck served Racine and a radius of 150 miles.

Early in the war the first fully equipped portable first-aid unit was planned and equipped by Dr. Supernaw and his assistant, Mr. R. O. McLean, Madison. It was a compact kit containing all necessary medical and surgical supplies for emergency aid, equipment for identifying patients, and indicating the type of injury and treatment given.

Casualty stations were set up in every community at convenient places of assembly—hospitals, schools and church basements. Each station had half a dozen stretcher teams organized in the immediate neighborhood, telephone communication with the control center so that activities of transportation groups, casualties and personnel could be reported promptly.

Such was the planning and organization of Emergency Medical Service in World War II in Wisconsin. Far from having been wasted energy, these civilian defense plans bore fruit in the consolidation of group thinking and cooperative and constructive action by the people for the protection of their communities. With the maintenance of well trained and equipped Emergency Medical Service staffs, every community was prepared to give adequate care to the injured and save lives which otherwise might have been lost.

This concludes the story of how Wisconsin physicians served the health needs of soldiers and civilians during one of the greatest of all wars. Their efforts and sacrifices were not, perhaps, greater than those of thousands of others whose lives were altered while they took up the fight for freedom.

Nevertheless, sickness and death are no respectors of time or geography. The Wisconsin military physicians on foreign battle fields found their skill and ability challenged many times in the relief of suffering and the saving of lives of fighting men. Back in the Midwest the civilian doctor found it no easy task to maintain the strength and health of men and women working continuously at peak productive capacity.

In a war without guns, a fight that pitted the ingenuity of modern science against disease and broken bodies, Wisconsin doctors made a significant contribution to victory and the preservation of the nation.
